

“Ilyana and James are like a post modern Burns and Allen. Funny, Smart, Honest, Loving, Tough. They care about their community, believe in positivity, share big ideas, ask hard questions and sing the most beautiful music. I love every episode. It’s the one podcast I listen to every week from start to finish, and sometimes listen to over again.” (Fan and Listener)

Ilyana Kadushin and James Harrell are a multi-disciplinary performing arts duo who just happen to be a married couple. This dynamic couple cohost & produce the No, I Know Podcast Show- a show about connections and empowerment of community. The show features interviews with entrepreneurs, creatives and leaders, music and theatrical performances mingled with husband and wife banter. After many years living in New York City, they relocated to the Eastern Shore of Maryland. Beyond the bumper stickers, flags and political parties, No, I Know Podcast is making connections and building community esteem by spotlighting those who make a difference. They empower the voices that would normally be overlooked.

NO, I KNOW PODCAST

Reviews from some of our listeners:

“I often talk about how the biggest impacts are local. You and your podcast No, I Know are brilliant and change-making. You are a big bright light in this world.”(Ami Vitale – Nat Geo Award Winning Photographer and Nikon Ambassador)

“This podcast is Insightful and Refreshing.”

“The No, I Know Podcast, provides new, unique, and positive food for thought on an array of current and creative topics. The discussions are smart, thoughtful, funny, and downright delightful! Love these two and their much-needed contribution to an Internet landscape that is too often bleak, negative, and fearful.”

“The raw talent and soul these two artists put into their podcast, showers me with such refreshing inspiration and energy.”

“Wife and Husband team, James and Ilyana bring intelligence, warmth, laughter and music to every episode. Listen and get inspired!”

“My favorite thing about this podcast is how authentic and down to earth the hosts, Ilyana and James are. The topics always change but the honest conversation is a constant. I also love listening to their entertaining husband and wife banter and their musical interludes. These two have a clear sense of what matters in life.”

“They have Inspiring guests and hosts, building new connections in this ever expanding digital world.”

“This show has social relevance and is entertaining.”

What is the No, I Know podcast live concert like?

A concert of original music and storytelling that engages the audience. Ilyana and James’s songs and stories are both deeply personal, sharing everything from addiction and marriage to social commentary and are meant to find common ground, bringing both humor and heart to most pressing issues today.

Their goals are to create a call to action to the audience, through music, conversations and performances. They strive to cultivate community esteem, bridge cultural, educational and political gaps and inspire people to make a difference despite their challenges.

Think of a contemporary version of A Prairie Home Companion meets social commentary reminiscent of Tom Lehrer and Woody Guthrie and distinct music duos spanning from rock (Pat Benatar/Neil Giraldo) to folk (Richard and Linda Thompson) to country couples (June Carter and Johnny Cash and Tammy Wynette & George Jones).
